

LaVon Martin, MBA

LaVon Martin is a Physical Environment Specialist in the Standards Interpretation Group at the Joint Commission. With more than 18 years of healthcare experience, he has expanded his knowledge of current industry standards and strives to make healthcare facilities safer.

LaVon resides in Northwest Pennsylvania where he previously worked for a hospital network as a hospital security supervisor before transitioning to a Safety Manager and then Facilities Manager prior to joining The Joint Commission. He has a bachelor's degree in Healthcare Administration and master's degree in Business Administration from Southern New Hampshire University. LaVon is also a member of the American Society for Healthcare Engineering (ASHE).

Along with his extensive background in Environment of Care and Life Safety standards, LaVon is willing to go above and beyond to help healthcare organizations become successful.